MAJESTIC.

Raymond Teal in the face of big opposition in the city last night played to a large house at the Majestic theater, presenting for the second time the delightful musical concoction "Teazy Weazy." The show went off with unusual snap and vim the beauty chorus having the large house with them at every turn and taking repeated encores for their efforts.

"Some Day," sung by Miss Charlotte Wood and Mr. Post, and Mr. Post's solo "Gee I Wish I Had a Girl," with the violin obligato, were the artistic hits of the night.

Raymond Teal has a show that with good weather ought to play to capacity nightly and it no doubt will. Monday the company change and presents for the first time here the oriental musical offering "The Sultan of Morocco," the big feature of this show will be Miss Frances Grey in her sensational Dervish dance. The costuming of the show is said to be very elaborate.

THE LIFE OF A WATCH.
It Depends Largely on the Watch and the Man Carrying It.

The life of a watch, jewelers say, depends largely on the person carrying it and the care taken of it. As to the care of a watch some jewelers say that it should be oiled once a year, some once in two years; perhaps once in eighteen months would be about the right thing, says the New York Sun.

All jewelers say that a watch should always be wound at the same time daily; this is essential to make it give the best results. If a watch is permitted to run down it may on rewinding keep different time and require regulating. With the watch wound regularly and kept running there is set up and established in the mainspring a certain tension. If this strain is wholly released by letting the watch run down the spring may on rewinding take on a somewhat different tension. This difference may be extremely slight, but it may be enough to affect the running of the watch.

While some watches are long lived, many are short lived, the long lived ones being of course those of fine quality that are also well cared for.

A limit to the life of any watch that is kept constantly in use. The best watches, like the best of anything, will wear out in time.

A watchmaker had lately brought in to him for repair a watch 125 years old that had been running practically continuously. It might be difficult to say just what duration its intervals of rest had been, but it was supposed to have been run practically continuously, and though it had stopped at least once, it was still in fairly good condition and good for some future use. But this was an extraordinary case. Most watches, however excellent they may have been originally, would with constant use wear out in far less time.

Sometimes there are brought in to jewelers fine old and once valuable watches whose owners desiring now to buy a new watch, wish to offer the old watch at some price in exchange; but it is of no value except for the weight of the metal contained in its cases. Every jeweler has an accumulative collection of such old works, which are of no value whatever, except that at long intervals there may be found among them a wheel or a part that may serve in some other old time watch brought in for repair.

So watches do wear out; and as to the life of a watch, a jeweler said a good average watch, with fair care, ought to wear from thirty to forty years, and a fine watch fifty years; it might last seventy-five, but fifty years would probably be nearer the figure.

It may be thought that a superior watch would last longer than that, but really the wonder is that this delicate piece of mechanism running year after year consistently should run so long. And as a matter of fact, comparatively few watches are put to the London, March 17.—The international arbitration board at a meeting today sang paeans of praise of President Taft's suggestion for an unqualified Anglo-American arbitration treaty and Sir Edward Grey's speech in support of the same.

Lord Chancellor Lornburn declared that when a man held an office such as the presidency of the United States, said what President Taft had said, he raised the hopes of all mankind.
